HELD OVER

To the September Term of the Grand
Jury Was Jesse Lyles, Charged
With Anglecoking a Freight
Train Near South Ripley
On July 4th.

The case of Jesse Lyles of this city, charged with anglecoking a freight train near South Ripley on July Fourth was tried in Police Court yesterday. The trial lasted for two hours and a half and ten men were placed on the witness stand.

The story told by the negro track-walker between Dover and a point east of South Ripley was that on the morning of July 4th he noticed Lyles on a freight train near South Ripley. Lyles was hanging to the side of the train and attempting to get off but the speed of the train prevented this. He crawled between the cars and reached down. Immediately the train began to slow down and stopped within a very few seconds. Lyles jumped off and was seen no more by the negro, Cheney.

The trainmen testified that the train was stopped by anglecoking but at what point in the train the men could not say as the cock was turned on again almost immediately. The drawbars were pulled out of two cars and the train delayed two hours by the accident.

Lyles attempted to prove that the train that he was on was stopped by a freight in front of their train. This was knocked in the head upon the producing of the C. & O. record book of trains passing through which showed that the last train that had passed through had been before six o'clock and this was about nine according to Lyles and the witnesses.

After hearing the testimony of the witnesses and of the defendant, Judge Whitaker decided to hold him over to the next term of the Grand Jury and placed his bond at $500. The prosecution seems to have a clear case against him and if convicted will get a very heavy sentence.

NARROW ESCAPE

From Death Had by James Vance of This City Wednesday Night at Lock and Dam No. 33 Just Above the City When a Sledge Hammer Hit Him on the Head.

James Vance, who lives back of the Home Warehouse, had a very narrow escape from death or serious injury Wednesday night at Lock and Dam No. 33 just above the city when he was struck on the side of the head by a sledge hammer.

Vance had been working with some other men in a sand barge at the side of the cofferdam and had gone down in the "hole." One of the men dropped a sledge hammer on the coffer and it hit Vance on the side of the head a glancing blow. He was knocked unconscious for about one hour, although after gaining consciousness he resumed work. Except for a large cut on the side of his head, he was all right today.

Vance had a very narrow escape from death. Had the hammer, which weighed sixteen pounds, fallen a few inches more to the right, his skull would have been crushed as if it were paper mache. The hammer fell over thirty feet as that is the distance from the top of the coffer to the bottom of the hole.

The workman who dropped the hammer was not to blame for the accident as it was very dark and he could not see beneath him. Altogether it was a very narrow escape for Vance.

She may economize elsewhere, but not on the sheerness and fineness of the little square of linen in her pocket. And she does not need to economize on this when 25c buys such handkerchiefs as we sell. As much care and thought go into them as into the costliest article in this store. One may even go below 25c and at 10c and 15c be sure of getting handkerchiefs that will be a pleasure to the eye and the touch.
